“I don’t want this in my life anymore...”

THE LAST CHAPTER, a dramatic mini-series set in the world of outlaw biker gangs, is a journey into a universe where violence can either be coolly calculated and carefully planned or can explode without warning. It explores the psychology of men who could easily be your neighbors, but have chosen crime as a way of life.

The Triple Sixers is one of the three largest outlaw biker gangs in the world. Profiting off loansharking, prostitution and drugs, their criminal activities are international. In Canada, the gang’s domain stretches from Halifax to Vancouver, with one important exception – they have no chapters in Ontario. Bob Durrelle (Michael Ironside) is given the task of opening a chapter in Toronto.

THE LAST CHAPTER

While Durrelle understands the advantages of joining the Triple Sixers, Ross Desbiens (Roy Dupuis), his partner and lifelong friend, is of a different opinion. They make a secret deal: while Durrelle establishes the Triple Sixers Chapter, Desbiens will organize all the gangs opposed to the Sixers into a rival group. By dividing and controlling the territory, they can monopolize the drug trade and share the profits.

The plan works, at first, but it is ultimately doomed. Neither Durrelle nor Desbiens can keep the most extreme of their "brothers" in line. The murders begin and soon neither Durrelle nor Desbiens can stop the spiral of violence they started. Their longtime friendship shatters as hostilities mount and the circle of killings comes home.

"There's nothing in the world more dangerous than a man who has nothing to lose..."
